When Hubby Comes.

"The most delightful person at a summer esort is the woman with a Sunday husband," says one who knows. "She is always to be found in some of the quieter resorts near the large cities. She is always pretty, usually young and the most devoted wife in the world-on Sundays. During the week, while her husband is down in the city, she is the leader of all the gayetles that are going on. She plays tennis with the college boys like the best of them; she flirts with the elderly men, who quite understand her, and she turns the heads of all the quite young men who don't understand her. this during week days. But on Saturday night everything is changed. When at duck the big stages come rumbling up to the little hostelry, with their long seats filled with tired, dusty-looking men, she stands, the best-dressed, the most eager-syed, affectionbest-dressed, the most eager-syed, affection-ate little woman in all the assembled crowd French's, 417 & 419 King St. of guests, and when Tom comes stepping up to the piszza she gives one wild little cry, settles on his ocat collar as if she had done nothing all the week but mourn his absence. And Tom pats her fluffy head and feels sure that he has the dearest little wife in all the world, and they walk off, she clinging fondly to his arm, quite like a pair of lovers, while all the men who have been her slaves all the week look foolish and would like to punch Tom's empty head. But they don't know, poor souls—and neither does Tom—that the whole thing was got up for their benefit. For a woman always likes to show a man the endearments that may be in store for some may, even though she has no wish nor pur-pose that they should be for him."—Albany Jour.
